invoiced.ca — SEO Launch Strategy

Your First 5 Articles + Claude Prompts to Write Them

Why These 5 Articles?

These aren't random blog posts. Each one targets a specific question Canadian freelancers are already googling with almost zero competition from existing results. QuickBooks and FreshBooks don't write these articles because they're too big to care about this niche. That's your lane. Each article ends with a natural call-to-action to sign up for invoiced.ca.

How to use this doc:

1. Buy your domain (invoiced.ca or similar) on Namecheap today
2. Set up /app/blog/[slug]/page.tsx in your Next.js project
3. For each article: copy the Claude prompt at the bottom of each section
4. Paste into Claude and say 'write this as a full blog post'
5. Publish one article per week — don't rush, quality beats quantity
6. Wait 90 days and check Google Search Console for which ones are getting clicks

Article 1 — The #1 Priority

Title	Do I Charge HST to US Clients? (2026 Guide for Canadian Freelancers)
URL slug	/blog/do-i-charge-hst-to-us-clients
Target keyword	"do I charge HST to US clients"
Why it wins	CRA's own page is confusing. Every answer on Reddit is wrong or outdated. Massive gap.
Search intent	Informational — they want a clear yes/no with explanation
Word count	1,200 - 1,500 words

Article Structure:

H1: Do I Charge HST to US Clients? The Definitive Answer

> Intro: Short, punchy — 'If you're a Canadian freelancer billing American clients, the answer is no — but here's exactly why and what to put on your invoice'

H2: The Short Answer

> No. US clients are zero-rated under the Excise Tax Act. Explain what zero-rated means in plain English.

H2: What is Zero-Rated Supply?

> Plain English explanation. No legalese. Link to CRA but summarize it yourself.

H2: What Do I Actually Write on the Invoice?

> Show exact wording: 'Zero-rated export supply — GST/HST not applicable (ETA s.123)'. This is the money section — nobody else gives this.

H2: Does This Apply to All International Clients?

Yes — UK, Australia, anywhere outside Canada. Explain briefly.

H2: Can I Still Claim Input Tax Credits?

Yes! This is the surprise benefit most freelancers don't know. You still claim ITCs on your expenses even though you charged zero tax.

H2: What If I'm Not GST/HST Registered?

Under $30K threshold — don't charge tax to anyone. Explain the small supplier rule.

CTA at end: 'invoiced.ca handles all of this automatically — zero-rated note added to US invoices, correct HST for Canadian clients, all in one tool.'

Claude Prompt — paste this to write the article:

> Write a 1,400 word blog post titled 'Do I Charge HST to US Clients? (2026 Guide for Canadian Freelancers)'. Target keyword: 'do I charge HST to US clients'. Audience: Canadian freelancers and contractors who bill American clients and are confused about tax. Tone: clear, plain English, conversational but authoritative. No legalese. Structure: H1 title, short punchy intro (2-3 sentences), then H2 sections covering: 1) The short answer (no, zero-rated), 2) What zero-rated supply means in plain English, 3) The exact wording to put on the invoice including the ETA s.123 note, 4) Does this apply to all international clients, 5) Can I still claim input tax credits (yes — this is a benefit), 6) What if I'm not GST/HST registered. End with a CTA paragraph naturally mentioning an invoicing tool that handles Canadian tax automatically. Include the target keyword naturally 3-4 times. Do not stuff keywords. Write for humans first.

Article 2 — The Calculator Page

Title	HST Calculator for Canadian Freelancers — Every Province (2026)
URL slug	/blog/hst-calculator-canadian-freelancers
Target keyword	"HST calculator Canada" / "GST HST calculator freelancer"
Why it wins	Calculator pages rank AND convert. People using a calculator are ready to invoice.
Search intent	Tool — they want to calculate something right now
Word count	600 words + embedded calculator widget

Article Structure:

H1: HST/GST Calculator for Canadian Freelancers

Embed an interactive calculator RIGHT AT THE TOP — province dropdown + invoice amount = tax breakdown

H2: HST/GST Rates by Province (2026)

Simple table — every province, tax type, rate. This table alone will rank.

H2: How Canadian Tax Works for Freelancers

HST provinces vs GST+PST provinces. Two-line items vs one. Quebec QST.

H2: What About US and International Clients?

Zero-rated — link to Article 1 for full explanation.

CTA: 'This calculator is built into invoiced.ca — it runs automatically when you create an invoice.'

IMPORTANT: Build a real interactive calculator on this page in Next.js. It's the #1 reason people will share and link to it.

Claude Prompt — paste this to write the article:

Write a 700 word blog post titled 'HST/GST Calculator for Canadian Freelancers — Every Province (2026)'. Target keyword: 'HST calculator Canadian freelancers'. The page will have an interactive calculator embedded at the top (don't describe it, just leave a placeholder comment [CALCULATOR WIDGET HERE]). After the calculator include: 1) A clean table of every Canadian province with tax type and current rate (HST provinces: ON 13%, NS/NB/NL/PEI 15%; GST+PST provinces: BC 5%+7%, SK 5%+6%, MB 5%+7%; GST only: AB 5%; QC GST 5%+QST 9.975%), 2) A short plain-English explanation of the difference between HST provinces and GST+PST provinces, 3) A section on what happens with US/international clients (zero-rated, link to other article), 4) A natural CTA at the end. Keep it concise — the calculator does the heavy lifting, the text just needs to explain context.

Article 3 — The Beginner Question

Title	Should I Register for GST/HST? The $30K Rule Explained (Canadian Freelancers)
URL slug	/blog/should-i-register-gst-hst-canada
Target keyword	"should I register for GST HST" / "GST HST $30000 threshold"
Why it wins	Every new freelancer asks this. Huge search volume. Existing answers are dry CRA documents.
Search intent	Informational — new freelancer trying to figure out if they need to register
Word count	1,000 - 1,200 words

Article Structure:

- H1: Should I Register for GST/HST? The $30K Threshold Explained
  - Intro: 'Most new freelancers don't know about this rule — and it can cost you if you get it wrong'
- H2: The $30,000 Rule in Plain English
  - Under $30K in 4 rolling quarters = small supplier = no registration required
- H2: Should I Register Voluntarily Before $30K?
  - YES if you have business expenses — you can claim ITCs. This is the surprise benefit.
- H2: How to Register (Step by Step)
  - CRA Business Registration Online — takes 20 minutes. Walk them through it.
- H2: What Happens After You Register?
  - You now collect HST from Canadian clients. File quarterly or annually. The mechanics.
- H2: What If I Only Bill US Clients?
  - Still worth registering for ITCs — your Canadian expenses are deductible.
- CTA: 'Once you're registered, invoiced.ca automatically adds the right tax to every invoice'

Claude Prompt — paste this to write the article:

Write a 1,100 word blog post titled 'Should I Register for GST/HST? The $30K Rule Explained for Canadian Freelancers'. Target keyword: 'should I register for GST HST Canada'. Audience: Canadian freelancers who are new or just starting out and confused about whether they need to register. Tone: warm, plain English, like a knowledgeable friend explaining it. Cover: 1) The $30K small supplier threshold in plain English, 2) Why you might want to register voluntarily even before $30K (ITCs on your business expenses — laptop, software, home office), 3) Step by step how to register with CRA Business Registration Online, 4) What changes after you register — collecting HST from Canadian clients, filing returns, 5) Special note for freelancers who only bill US/international clients (still worth registering for ITCs). End with a natural CTA about an invoicing tool that handles the tax calculation automatically. Include a simple example — e.g. 'if you buy a $1,200 laptop for your business, you can claim back the $180 HST as an ITC'.

Article 4 — The Local SEO Play

Title	Nova Scotia Freelancer Tax Guide 2026 — HST, Income Tax & Invoicing
URL slug	/blog/nova-scotia-freelancer-tax-guide
Target keyword	"Nova Scotia freelancer tax" / "Nova Scotia HST freelancer"
Why it wins	Hyper local = almost zero competition. Google loves location-specific content. You're literally in NS.
Search intent	Informational — NS freelancer wanting province-specific answers not generic Canada stuff
Word count	1,000 - 1,200 words

Article Structure:

H1: Nova Scotia Freelancer Tax Guide 2026

Intro: 'Nova Scotia has the highest HST rate in Canada at 15% — here's everything you need to know as a freelancer'

H2: Nova Scotia HST Rate — 15%

NS is a harmonized province. One combined federal + provincial tax. Simple.

H2: When Do You Charge HST in Nova Scotia?

Only to Canadian clients. Zero-rated for US/international. Cover both cases.

H2: Nova Scotia Income Tax for Freelancers

Self-employment income. T2125 form. Quarterly instalment payments. Keep 30-35% aside.

H2: Home Office Deductions in Nova Scotia

Percentage of rent/mortgage, utilities, internet. Quick practical guide.

H2: Sample Nova Scotia Invoice

Show an actual example invoice with 15% HST line and the zero-rated version for US clients.

CTA: 'Built in Halifax — invoiced.ca automatically applies NS HST 15% to your Canadian invoices'

TIP: Mention Halifax, Dartmouth, Cape Breton naturally in the article — boosts local SEO signals

Claude Prompt — paste this to write the article:

Write a 1,100 word blog post titled 'Nova Scotia Freelancer Tax Guide 2026 — HST, Income Tax & Invoicing'. Target keyword: 'Nova Scotia freelancer tax'. Audience: freelancers and self-employed contractors based in Nova Scotia (Halifax, Dartmouth, Cape Breton, etc). Make it feel locally relevant — mention that NS has the highest HST rate in Canada at 15%. Cover: 1) Nova Scotia's 15% HST rate and what harmonized means, 2) When to charge HST vs when it's zero-rated (US/international clients), 3) Nova Scotia income tax basics for freelancers — T2125 form, quarterly instalments, setting aside 30-35%, 4) Home office deductions — how to calculate the percentage, what's deductible, 5) A sample invoice example showing HST 15% on a $1,000 invoice to a Canadian client, and the same invoice zero-rated for a US client. Mention Halifax and Nova Scotia naturally throughout. End with a CTA about an invoicing tool built by a Halifax developer that handles NS HST automatically.

Article 5 — The Template Page

Title	Free Canadian Invoice Template 2026 — With Correct HST/GST (Word, PDF, Excel)
URL slug	/blog/free-canadian-invoice-template

Target keyword	"Canadian invoice template" / "invoice template Canada HST"
Why it wins	Insane search volume. People downloading templates are ready to invoice = perfect customers.
Search intent	Download — they want a template right now. Give it free, convert to paid tool.
Word count	600 words + free downloadable template

Article Structure:

H1: Free Canadian Invoice Template — HST/GST Included (2026)

Put the download button FIRST before any text. Remove friction immediately.

H2: What Makes a Canadian Invoice Different?

GST/HST number required once registered. Province-specific tax lines. Zero-rated for international.

H2: What to Include on a Canadian Invoice

Checklist: your name/business, GST number, invoice number, date, due date, line items, tax breakdown, total, payment info.

H2: Canadian Invoice Template by Province

Show example for HST province (simple) vs GST+PST province (two tax lines) vs US client (zero-rated).

CTA: 'Or skip the template entirely — invoiced.ca generates the invoice automatically with correct tax'

IMPORTANT: Actually make a free downloadable invoice template (PDF or Google Sheets). The download is the hook.

Claude Prompt — paste this to write the article:

Write a 650 word blog post titled 'Free Canadian Invoice Template 2026 — With Correct HST/GST'. Target keyword: 'Canadian invoice template'. The page will have a download button at the very top before any body text (leave placeholder [DOWNLOAD BUTTON HERE]). Cover: 1) What makes a Canadian invoice legally different from a US invoice (GST/HST number, province-specific taxes), 2) A clear checklist of everything a proper Canadian invoice must include, 3) Three example invoice breakdowns: one for an Ontario client (HST 13%), one for a BC client (GST 5% + PST 7%), one for a US client (zero-rated with the ETA note), 4) When you need to show your GST/HST registration number. Keep it scannable — use the checklist and examples format. End with a CTA that positions the invoicing tool as the upgrade from manually filling out templates.

Publishing Schedule

Don't publish all 5 at once. Space them out so Google sees consistent activity.

Week	Article	Priority
Week 1 (Launch)	Article 1 — Do I charge HST to US clients?	■ Highest — publish first
Week 2	Article 3 — Should I register for GST/HST?	High — catches new freelancers
Week 3	Article 2 — HST Calculator page	High — needs calculator widget built
Week 4	Article 5 — Free invoice template	High — needs downloadable template
Week 5	Article 4 — Nova Scotia tax guide	Medium — local SEO long game

What To Do After Publishing Each Article

1. Set up Google Search Console (free) — submit your sitemap so Google finds the articles faster

2. Post the article on Twitter/X with 'just wrote this because I kept seeing Canadian freelancers confused about X'
3. Share in 2-3 relevant Facebook groups or Reddit communities (r/PersonalFinanceCanada, r/freelance)
4. Wait 90 days — check Search Console to see which articles are getting impressions
5. Double down on whichever article is gaining traction — write more on that topic
